

PROBLEM STATEMENT

House price predictor AI

Challenge

Accurately predicting real estate valuations is difficult due to the complex, non-linear interactions between disparate factors such as zoning classifications, structural age, and precise spatial metrics like basement and lot square footage. Furthermore, relying on manual data entry across fragmented systems introduces operational inefficiencies, making it challenging to deliver instantaneous, reliable price estimations while handling missing or inconsistent property attributes.